CITY NOTES.

Gentlemen's Driving Club races Saturday, 2 p. m.

There will be a regular meeting of the Press club this evening.

Rapid progress is being made in the erection of the iron work of Hotel Jersey.

The Delaware and Hudson company's employees at the Dickson and Von Storch mines, were paid yesterday.

Marriage licenses were granted yesterday to Joseph Mene and Clara Lake, both of Scranton; James McWilliams and Emma Ward, of Scranton.

Judge Edwards held naturalization court in the arbitration room yesterday afternoon and made citizens of a large number of aspirants.

Last night's storm prevented a quorum for the meeting of the Sheridan Monument association which was postponed until next Wednesday evening.

Attention is called to the lines of goods published today by the Scranton Cash Store on this page of THE TRIBUNE. It must make a big stock of goods.

The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company paid its employees at the Bellevue, Dodge and Oxford mines yesterday and will pay today at the Hampton and Sloan mines.

Court yesterday transferred the hotel house of Wills & Higgins to P. B. Higgins, one of the partners, Mr. Wills having withdrawn from the firm. The hotel house of Michael Bosak, of the Second ward of Olyphant, was transferred to Antoni Galinski.

Mrs. Kate J. Boyce Fuller, through Attorney C. H. Pletcher, asked the court yesterday to grant her a divorce from A. Gordon Fuller. They were married in Lake, N. Y., on Nov. 25, 1880, and lived together until March 15, 1892. Cruel treatment is the ground on which the divorce is asked.

Chief Simpson has placed an officer on duty on the following street crossings: Corner of Lackawanna and Franklin avenue, Wyoming and Lackawanna, Wyoming and Spruce street, and Court House square, Washington avenue side. Street crossings have become so dangerous that a policeman at the above named corners is absolutely necessary.

Louis Raymond, a Delaware, Lackawanna and Western fireman, met with an accident at Nicholson yesterday caused by his slipping on the step of the engine and being squeezed by the tender and the water tank. He was brought to Scranton and conveyed to Moses Taylor hospital where it was found that his collar bone was fractured. He was reported to be progressing favorably last night.

The classes in English branches and millinery will be organized to-night at the Young Women's Christian association. Instruction will be given by competent teachers in reading, spelling and grammar, history, rhetoric, physiology and geography. Terms 50 cents in addition to membership fee of $1. This class fee entitles pupil to one other class, either Monday night writing class or Friday night needlework class. Rev. E. S. Miller will conduct the twenty-minute service to-day at the Young Women's Christian association at 2:15. Miss Corrigan will sing. All young women are invited.

Gentlemen's Driving Club races Saturday, 2 p. m.

PARRY'S MILWAUKEE BEER, cool and sparkling, at Lohman's, Spruce street.

NEW TRIAL ASKED FOR.
Dr. A. E. Burr Wants to Get Before a Jury Again.
An application for a new trial has been made to the court in the case of Dr. A. E. Burr against John Kase and H. Stone. The action is one in ejectment, and was tried last week and resulted in a verdict for the defendants.

WATER IS GOING DOWN

Efforts Made to Check the Flow of Water Into the Hallstead Mine at Duryea.

One of the most active and interesting mining scenes in the history of this valley is the work being done by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company to conquer the flow of water which has been pouring into its Hallstead shaft at Duryea since Friday, Sept. 21.

A cave occurred in the mine on the date mentioned and within a few days No. 1 vein was flooded and the vein above, No. 2 contained four or five feet of water. Pumps of large capacity were set at work while the mine officials tried to find the source of the flood. They were unsuccessful in this but concluded the water came from crevices extending to the swamp land and mountain streams on the surface.

Meanwhile the pumps made no impression on lowering the flood, and a larger force of men were put at work, and among the pumps added was one of the Worthington pattern of immense capacity, which was on exhibition at the World's fair. A hundred men, including all the available carpenters, machinists and firemen were present in service, as well as a small army of laborers.

Yesterday the water was lowered one inch in the twenty-four hours. What operations will be necessary to check the flow can only be determined after the water is lowered sufficiently to disclose the point of entry.

MARRIED AT POTTSVILLE.

Many Scrantonians Attended the Arch-bald-Baird Wedding.

The wedding at Pottsville yesterday of Joseph Archibald, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Archibald, of this city, to Miss Jessie Baird, was attended by a large number of Scranton friends.

The family party left for Pottsville Tuesday, and the guests left yesterday morning in a special car attached to the 7:45 Delaware and Hudson train. Among the latter were: Judge and Mrs. R. W. Archibald, Miss Nan Archibald, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Catlin, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Simpson, Major and Mrs. Everett Warren, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kingsbury, Mrs. E. J. Bennett, Miss Bennett, Mrs. Massie, Mrs. Henry Belin, Jr., Mrs. N. G. Robertson, Mrs. E. L. Allen, Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Allen, Miss Hunt, Miss Holmes, Honesdale; J. W. Oakford.

The ceremony was performed in the First Presbyterian church at 6 o'clock and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's uncle, Heber S. Thompson, manager of the Pottsville trusts of the Girard estate. The bridal party included the following: Maid of honor, Miss Margaret Thompson, of Pottsville; bridesmaids, Miss Archibald and Miss Augusta Archibald, Scranton; Miss Holmes, Albany; Miss Marie Thompson, Miss Lee and Miss Russell, Pottsville; James Archibald, Jr., a brother of the groom, best man; Dr. Alfred Hand, Jr., Philadelphia; F. G. Fisher, Chicago; A. G. Hunt, Scranton; F. C. Pratt, Hartford; J. G. Dann, Buffalo; Carl Miller, New Rochelle, N. Y., ushers.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 3.—The most fashionable wedding seen in this city for years was that of Joseph Albright Archibald to Miss Jessie Carey Baird, which was solemnized this evening in the First Presbyterian church. Rev. Dr. Belville, the venerable pastor emeritus, performed the ceremony. The bride is an heiress, beautiful and accomplished and a daughter of the late Colonel Edward Baird. She is also a niece of Major Heber S. Thompson, of this city. The groom belongs to one of the best and most wealthy families in Scranton, Pa., and is engaged in the coal business in this county. The decorations were arranged by Henry Walters, the Germantown florist. Guests were present from Philadelphia, Scranton and New York. The young couple left on an extended trip.

THE MAN FROM BOSTON

Crowd at the Frothingham to see the ex-Champion.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN WELL RECEIVED

The Once Great Gladiator Freely Discusses the Corbett-Fitzsimmons Muddle with a Tribune Reporter. He Believes the Pompadour Can Beat the Kangaroo—His Acting a Trifle Yellow, but He Caught the House.

The unwaning attachment of popular affection to the ex-champion heavyweight of the prize ring, John L. Sullivan, who played an engagement at the Frothingham last night, is as fresh and vital today as when in his palmy days he reigned as king of muscular strength and physical development.

Age has settled lightly on him, reports to the contrary notwithstanding. A TRIBUNE reporter passed away a short half hour with him in his suite of rooms at the Westminster yesterday evening while the giant was waiting for supper. He was agreeable, thoughtful and communicative. Since noon he had enjoyed a nap and a much desired freedom from the morbidly curious who packed the entrances of the hotel in hopes of getting a glimpse of him. A traveling man stopping at the Westminster, who bears a striking resemblance to the lithographs of the ex-champion, furnished the guests much amusement by palming himself off to the gaping crowds as the only John L.

SULLIVAN IS CORPULENT.

The reporter was enabled to observe Mr. Sullivan's physical stature as he began to dress for supper. His lower body has grown more stocky, and is a trifle out of proportion to, and does not match well with his snowy thighs and arms. He is inclining toward that obesity that stamps a man of sedentary occupation, but he declares that he feels himself as muscularly active and strong as ever. He is now approaching his thirty-sixth year, having been born on Oct. 15, 1858, in the city of Boston.

"Do you like the stage?" asked the reporter.

"Yes, I do. I like the varying life that it brings, and it has been a success to me. I have no reason to complain of it whatsoever."

"Will you ever fight in the ring again?"

"Well, you shall have to ask me an easier question than that. I may and I may not. It all depends on what the future brings forth; it depends on what grade of pugilists springs up hereafter. For a candid fact, I have not given the matter any consideration."

"What do you think of the present champion, Jim Corbett, with regard to the interchange of correspondence through the newspapers between himself and Fitzsimmons?" also about Corbett and Peter Jackson?"

A ROAST FOR CORBETT.

"It is my opinion that Corbett and the colored man will never come together. Corbett and Fitzsimmons must, if the former has any sand in him. This talk of his that Fitzsimmons is not in his class makes me sick. My dear boy, we are all in this world for what's in it, prize fighters as well as the rest of the folk. Money is the idol and the goal of Fitzsimmons has the 'long green' and is willing to put up the stuff."

"How Corbett can turn away from a man because he is not in his class, although the man is able to back his challenge, is more than I can understand. Ent it is only a newspaper and to get a rivalistic with people holding a forest of umbrellas, rain dripping through the canvas, and a lively competition between the evangelist's voice and the patter of the rain. Notwithstanding all the inducements for people to depart, scarcely any one left the tent and the service proceeded as usual."

Mr. Schiverea preached an excellent sermon and conducted a revival service, during which many people responded to his invitation to relate their experiences.

RAISING THE FALLEN

Evangelist Schiverea Exhibits an Audience of Girls at Florence Mission.

SEVERAL RESOLVE TO REFORM

His Pathetic Appeal Caused a Flow of Tears—Reminiscences of Early Life Discloses Their Better Nature. Other Meetings at Gospel Tent and Car Shops—Rescue Mission Services for Men at Midnight.

The meeting at the Florence mission at 10:30 o'clock last night, was probably the most impressive meeting held by Evangelist Schiverea during his mission in the city.

Special efforts had been made to secure a representative audience of the girls of the alleys and in this the promoters of the meeting were successful. The evangelist at once won the hearts and attention of the girls by his opening prayer, in which he seemed to be endowed with terrible earnestness. Mr. Weeden then sang with unusual pathos the song composed by Tallie Morgan for the occasion, "The Prodigal Daughter," and his appropriate wording was deeply felt. The girls then sang the gospel tune, "Why Not Come to Jesus Tonight," and excellent voices could be heard joining in the refrain.

Throughout his address Mr. Schiverea kept the important fact of the composition of his audience in view and struck the keynote of their interest by relating a case of a fallen girl in Philadelphia who out of low life raised herself to the position of a happy wife and a proud mother, but he attained a climax when he eloquently and pathetically referred to the scenes of childhood, the happy and bright days of youth, and brought back to mind the fondling caresses of their mothers and pictured that although their mother may then be lying in the cold grave, her soul was watching over her daughter who though fallen, was dearer than ever.

A PATHETIC SCENE

Tears were trickling down every face as the truths uttered by the evangelist were heard by the girls and received as if applied to each one individually. He then, in a sympathetic manner, appealed to them to accept the invitation of Christ, "Come to me ye weary," and described with much effect the horrible ending of a life such as those who were before him led, and pleaded with them to consider how happy they would be in this world, possibly a noble wife or a loving mother.

"Let me plead with you just as you are. There is nothing to gain by remaining as you are but to lose, don't think of the past you can't better it now, but girls, do decide tonight. Jesus loves you and has loved you all along, he is waiting ready to grant you his forgiveness, don't worry for the future, kind friend will see to that, but tonight make Jesus your friend."

At the conclusion of the address and while the audience were engaged in silent prayer he asked the girls who wished that night to make Jesus their friend to hold up their hand. Several did so and promised with tears to reform and lead better lives. A large number are in the Florence mission.

At midnight Mr. Schiverea held a mission for men at the Rescue Mission and after coffee and sandwiches had been served he delivered an earnest practical address.

The evening meeting was largely attended, despite the storm, lightning and thunder. During the song service an exciting accident befell the tent, which is described fully in another column. The tent presented a remarkable scene crowded with people holding a forest of umbrellas, rain dripping through the canvas, and a lively competition between the evangelist's voice and the patter of the rain. Notwithstanding all the inducements for people to depart, scarcely any one left the tent and the service proceeded as usual.

Mr. Schiverea preached an excellent sermon and conducted a revival service, during which many people responded to his invitation to relate their experiences.

THE MAN FROM BOSTON

The hero, as agent of large estates, intercepts the devious schemes of a villainous nephew of the owner, and in the last act the nephew is unmasked and turns out to be a bogus relation. The regulation springing of a child is not omitted, but could be without destroying the effects of the production. Mr. Sullivan's acting was somewhat forced, but his character fits him well and with future training he will acquit himself capitally.

A word must be said about Bobby Mack, who assumes the part of Pat Higgins, an Irish gardener. In real life Mr. Mack is known by his proper name, Michael J. Tighe. He is a South Side boy and enjoys a position among clever Irish caricature comedians of which he may well be proud. The upper tier of the house warmly received him and he richly deserved it. His conception of ludicrous stage work showed true merit and evoked warm applause.

In the last act a short three-round set-to between the ex-champion and his sparring partner, Daniel Dwyer, was the finishing climax to the play, beautiful and accomplished and a daughter of the late Colonel Edward Baird. She is also a niece of Major Heber S. Thompson, of this city. The groom belongs to one of the best and most wealthy families in Scranton, Pa., and is engaged in the coal business in this county.
